Press freedom to me means the ability and complete rights of journalists to seek and disseminate information to the public without any intimidation or threats and without any fear of what will happen to them, their livelihood and loved ones if they publish information that some powerful members of society don’t like.